

I'll mow it down, he said, and then I'll take a willow branch and pull it up. He laid her on the ground. "What the hell," said the old man, "for this you need to know how to handle it. I know," Willy said, "but I'll try anyway. The old man put down his stick and took up a willow branch. All the next day he was busy doing more and more with it, and by the end of the day, according to Willy, he already owned this branch so much that he could do anything with it. "Now I can prick a man or put a willow branch on his head," said Will, "and hurt his eye."
