Through a feature called Ujog, InShare, and InDesign users can create profiles with certain settings or actions and send the profiles to Photoshop users for review. When a Photoshop user receives a Share for Review profile that he or she needs to edit, the profile is printed on plastic and the user takes it to Photoshop. This enables Photoshop users to work directly on the Share for Review file, without having a copy of the original file on their local computer. The PSD file is open directly in Photoshop, and the user can make corrections or even create a new PSD file from the original. Share for Review also enables more efficient sharing and collaboration. For instance, when an editor shares a Pro Photo retouching profile, the freelancer can view the file from Photoshop or from any supported mobile device without leaving Photoshop. He or she can make edits to the freelancer's account in Photoshop or contact the freelancer through other channels for a final inspection.
